POLICIES & ADVERTISEMENT SPECS

Editorial Policy

The purpose of this document is to outline the principles, practices and policies that both SACRS & SP&A upholds in meeting the highest standards of editorial integrity for the SACRS magazine to our members. As an editorial content provider, we recognize, respect and adhere to the ethical conduct acknowledged by both our pension industry and the publishing industry. SACRS & SP&A strives to achieve and support the high standards of journalism today through good judgment and a commitment to our editorial principles, practices and process.

Topics of interest to SACRS magazine would include the following: Alternative Investing, Asset Servicing, Defined Benefit Plans, Defined Contribution, Governance, Hedge Funds, International, Investment Strategy, Investment Technology, Money Managers, Mutual Funds, Private Equity, Real Estate, Regulation & Legislation, Trading & Research and Venture Capital.

Our Principles

We adhere to a common set of professional journalistic principles that guide our staff, our processes and our operations. Those editorial principles are truthfulness, accuracy, objectivity, impartiality, fairness and accountability. We maintain an individual and collective responsibility to uphold these principles throughout our organization and in particular when producing the SACRS magazine.

Responsibility

We believe that educational articles are a vital form of communication and should be held to a high level of accountability, responsibility and integrity. Articles must illustrate and reflect the events in our business community today and therefore have a responsibility to be delivered to the membership with accuracy and impartiality.

Independence

Only our editorial staff will have control over the articles publishing process — from assignment to delivery. At no time do we permit non-editorial individuals or groups to have influence over our editorial coverage or workflow. Our editorial coverage is free of obligation and has no conflict of interest in its creation or production process.

Integrity

Integrity is the driving force behind all that we do and it is a founding principle that unites the SP&A and SACRS organizations. We maintain the balance of an individual's right to privacy with our obligation to cover the story. Our commitment to integrity is reflected throughout our editorial workflow and our fair and unbiased coverage of the events and stories of today.

Our Practices

We have instituted what we believe to be clear and non-ambiguous practices to uphold our core principles. These practices comprise our code of conduct that is expected of all levels of editorial staff, contributors and partners of SACRS & SP&A.

1. SP&A and staff maintain complete control over the gathering and distribution of articles and editorials placed in the SACRS magazine.
2. SP&A will not accept special editorial access or privileges by virtue of SP&A business relationships.
3. No editorial staff member will operate in a self-serving manner. No staff member shall let their personal opinions influence the coverage of stories or events, nor shall a third party be allowed to dictate or influence our editorial process.
4. We will never censor our editorial coverage. If there are editorial concerns, SP&A will work with the author to clarify the proposed article on the principles established within this policy.
5. All articles will be credited to reflect the source.

Submission Policy

The editor solicits articles appearing in SACRS magazine, proposals for topics and authors should be directed to sulema@sacrs.org.

When submitting the first draft of an article to SACRS magazine, the author should send an electronic version of the paper, written in Word, to sulema@sacrs.org. Our street address is 1225 8th St., Suite 550 Sacramento, CA. 95814.

Please submit articles double-spaced, printing only on one side of the paper. Number the pages, so we don't assume that a missing page is just a jump in syntax. Also, number tables and charts, and put them on separate pages. Footnotes and references should be double-spaced at the end of the article. If you have no diagrams, graphs, or tables in your article, consider the possibility of adding one. If you have eight or ten exhibits already attached to your article, consider the possibility that you have gotten carried away with your graphics software.

We hope that most articles will offer a kind of intellectual arbitrage that will be useful for every member. For some, it will be a look into the insights and issues in a specialty or discipline in which they do not specialize. For specialists, the articles will lead to thoughts about the questions underlying their research, which directions have been most productive, and what the key questions are. Since most of us are sometimes a specialist, sometimes a non-specialist, sometimes teacher, sometimes student, good articles will speak to each of us in different ways.

Advertising

SACRS will consider accepting paid advertisements from its affiliate and system members. SACRS has implemented this allowance for advertisements in the SACRS magazine as a way to help offset the production costs for the magazine. Advertisement locations will be limited to the last page (front and back) and the inside covers, for a total of four pages. The editor reserves the right to re-locate advertisement placement due to space/design/best fit/competing subject matter. The editor also reserves the right to reject any advertisements that do not meet the guiding principles of the organization. Advertisements will only be modified by mutual agreement between the editor and the advertiser.
